Details:

Campbell is young session and freelance drummer and music teacher located in Melbourne. He is currently instructing drums at Scotch College, taking both group classes and private lessons. He has been teaching both privately and at Scotch for 4 years, and has been involved in some of Australia's premier ensembles, including the Australian Southern Stars Drumline, and has recently returned from Beijing, being involved in the Beijing 2008 Olympic Orchestra. He is regularly gigging around Melbourne, and has vast studio experience.

Private lessons are $25 for half an hour, or $45 an hour at his home in Camberwell. Campbell is experienced in teaching students between the ages of 7 - 35, from beginners to experienced players. Styles taught cover jazz, funk, hip hop. R n B, rock, punk, metal, drum n bass and anything in between.

Campbell's teaching philosophy is based around having fun with music, while developing skill. A basis of solid technique is essential, while still maintaining an interesting and challenging learning environment

All lessons are supplemented by an extensive library of online videos and interactive help on his website, and a graded syllabus is available for students wishing to undertake exams.
